The Things You Saw

TASSOS SPILIOTOPOULOS

A personal tribute to the music of Allan Holdsworth

Guitarist and composer Tassos Spiliotopoulos announces his new EP, The Things You Saw, a collection of original compositions inspired by the music of the late, influential guitarist Allan Holdsworth.

Known for his lyrical compositions and distinctive approach to modern jazz guitar, Spiliotopoulos draws upon one of his early musical influences for a project that is as much a personal reflection as it is a tribute.

Rather than interpreting Holdsworth's existing repertoire, The Things You Saw explores the lasting impression his music has made on Spiliotopoulos, translating that inspiration into an original musical statement.

> "The music of Allan Holdsworth made a great impression on me early on. I wanted to pay tribute to this extraordinary musician, but I didn't want to make an album of covers. Instead, I decided to compose my own music, inspired by what I hear and feel when I listen to his recordings.
> These compositions aren't necessarily an attempt to imitate Allan's style of writing or playing. They might not even sound particularly similar to his music. I think that's something for the listener to decide.
>
> For me, this project is about interpreting the feeling his music gives me, rather than trying to recreate the music itself."
>

With The Things You Saw, Spiliotopoulos offers an individual perspective on musical influence, celebrating Holdsworth's legacy not through imitation, but through the creation of new music.

The result is a tribute that looks beyond the distinctive sound of its inspiration, focusing instead on the creative possibilities it continues to open up.
